

Andrew Gold
The editor of Canon magazine and a second-year Liberal Studies Student, concentrating on literary criticism and intellectual history.

A second-year Liberal Studies student, local DJ, and general troublemaker.

Shel Kimen

Britton Calvert

A first-year Liberal Studies student from Appalachian State University in North Carolina. His main interests are social theory anthropology, and the problems of nationalism. In particular Britton is interested in the connection between the creation of knowledge and culture, and forms of domination enacted by the state and/or non-governmental entities.

Debbie Goldgaber

A second-year Liberal Studies student and aspiring writer.

A Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Astrology at the Graduate Faculty for many years. His projected publications include Toward a Phenomenological Reevaluation of the Culinary; Living in the Shade: A Psychological Study of Diogenes, and "An Astrologer's Commentary on Pierre Bayle's Astral Commentary," Journal of Postmodern Agricultural Practices, vol. 47, no. 2 (February 2008). He is currently sleeping.

Jacques Boudois

A second-year LS student. Mark is also a contributing writer for Stop Smiling magazine and The Roast Modern Times and a contributing editor for online literary journal Me Three.

Alex Urevick-Ackelsberg

A student in the Liberal Studies program at the GF. His interests reside somewhere between psychology, history, media studies, sociology, and politics.

Ilya Gofman

A Master's Philosophy student

Suzanne Wexler

A second-semester Liberal Studies student. Originally from Montreal, Suzanne received her B.A. degree from Trinity College at the University of Toronto. She is particularly interested in the function and practice of psychology in North American culture.

Becca Wolfson

A Liberal Studies student and writer.

Joanne Strasser

A second-year Liberal Studies student. Fluent in both German and Russian, Joanne divides her time between working at the Leo Baeck Institute for the study and history of German-speaking Jewry and the Russian-American Cultural Center. Joanne is writing her thesis on the theme of nostalgia represented in Russian emigre culture in the US since 1978.

Mark Grueter

A first-year Liberal Studies student who will one day get himself organized.

Nicholas Allanach

First-year Liberal Studies student who will one day get himself organized.

Fvan Feldman

A second-year Sociology MA student. He lives in Brooklyn, and is currently single.

Amy Wilson

A Junior in the Photography Department at Parsons School of Design. She lives in Brooklyn.

Michael Kaplan

A first-year Political Science student, studying U.S. foreign policy towards Israel.

